Alleged Business Depression is Trained to its Source.

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—A trip up the Western side and down the Eastern side of the State was recently made by a representative of the Detroit News to inquire in many communities regarding business conditions there. There were interviewed country merchants, traveling salesmen, small wholesalers, dairymen, business men from other States who were visiting the North. Michigan resorts, and any who in casual way revealed his knowledge of affairs.

The most striking feature of the whole proceeding was the course which the conversation invariably took.

"How is business up this way?" the questioner would begin.

"Well, I hear it is rather quiet," would be the answer.

"Hear it is quiet?" the questioner would remark, "What do you mean by that?"

"Well, the papers say things are quiet—that's all I know about it."

"So they do—but how is business with you?"

"Oh, my business is all right—I've no kick coming."

"Do you know anybody who has?"

"No—Come to think of it, I don't."

That was the invariable result. "They say business is quiet, but my business is all right."

A coffee salesman of experience says that May of this year was the month of his whole career in point of sales, and that the year thus far has been the best year he has ever had in point of collection of bills. He said that customers said about business, he replied that everybody said it was quiet, but everybody was ordering goods and paying for them.

A department store merchant in a bustling Northern town said that his place he had never seen so much cash business done voluntarily. People are not asking credit, and those who formerly had the credit habit now seem to have money.

A real estate man of twenty years' experience, whose business is building houses for workingmen and selling them on monthly payments, said that he had more contracts made this year than any other, that initial payments were larger than any year of his experience, and that monthly payments are coming in with a steadiness that is surprising. Yet he says that "they say" business is quiet.

The resort hotel keepers are jubilant at the early opening of the season, in spite of the backward weather.

Conductors on the smaller railway lines of the North say that travel is heavier than they remember it ever to have been, especially considering that so large a part of the travel is done by the residents of the districts themselves.

It appears that President Wilson was pretty nearly right when he said that the so-called depression was more psychological than industrial.

keep them as pets. The law says they must not be in your possession at any time if caught during the closed season. The law permits you to kill foxes, skunks, minks and other varmint varieties; provided, you can show conclusively that such varmints are destroying your poultry or other property, but they must be killed, not captured and held alive. Violation of this section is punishable by fine of twenty-five dollars.

Seining or netting for fish is lawful and allowed in the main waters of Missouri and Mississippi rivers at any time during the year; excepting, the months of April, May and June; provided, any seine or net used must have meshes measuring not less than two inches square, and further provided, that it is unlawful to seine or net within three hundred yards of the mouth of any stream flowing into any river. Any person may use a seine not more than twenty feet in length nor more than four in width—known as a "minnow seine"—for catching minnows to be used for bait only. Also, any person owning land along any unnavigable stream, or by permission of said land owner, may take fish from such stream, with common two-inch seine, for his own consumption or table use, but it is held unlawful to sell or offer for sale fish so taken. Violation of any part of the foregoing section pertaining to seining or netting of fish is punishable by a fine of fifty to two hundred dollars. It is also unlawful and punishable by a fine of twenty-five to one hundred dollars to engage in what is commonly known as "seining," which means the catching of fish with the hands in any of the waters of this state during the months of March, April, May and June.

Bear in mind you must have a "Hunter's License" in this state to hunt anything, at any time, anywhere, in any manner; provided, you may hunt without license upon your own or leased land for game only in open season. The section has been construed to mean that you cannot even hunt a rabbit or a possum, not even with a stick or a dog, without "Hunter's License."

License only costs "One Dollar." The fine for hunting without license is twenty-five to one hundred dollars; so you see it is cheaper to get a license than to take the risk of being caught hunting without a license. You are sure to pay the penalty if caught. You can't beat the case with all the lawyers in the state. If you are caught hunting without a license (excepted as noted) there is nothing left for the courts to do but adjudge you guilty and announce the fine.

When the additions and alterations to its huge grain elevator at Kansas City now under way are completed, the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain Railroad will have one of the largest of its kind in the world. As originally constructed, the elevator consisted of ten concrete circular storage tanks, with a capacity of 80,000 bushels each, or 800,000 bushels in all, and the elevator building proper, with a capacity of 200,000 bushels, a total plant capacity of 1,000,000 bushels. Forty additional concrete circular storage bins, 22 feet in diameter and 84 feet deep, with a capacity of 35,000 bushels each, or 3,500,000 bushels in all, are under construction, besides 18 smaller bins, with a capacity of 7,000 bushels each for 133,000 bushels total. The latter are what is known as "interstice" storage bins, and they will occupy the space formerly left vacant between the circular bins of this style of elevator. The elevator will have a total of 69 units of storage space, with a capacity of 2,133,000 bushels, which is more than double its present capacity. Two hundred men have been kept at work on the plant, night and day, for the past two months. It is expected that the improvements will be completed and the elevator in operation by August 1st, in time to handle a good share of the heavy wheat crop now being harvested in that section of the country.

Pottery Record Broken.

Figures just made public by the United States Geological Survey show that the pottery industry was in a prosperous condition in 1913. All during the spring and summer and well into the fall of last year business was generally reported as unusually good, and the result was the largest production in the history of the industry. This is believed to be due to the improved texture, finish, color, and decoration of the American product, which now equals, if it does not surpass, some of the best of the imported ware.

The value of the pottery products of the United States in 1913, according to Jefferson Middleton, of the Geological Survey, was $36,902,375, the largest yet reported, exceeding that of 1912 by $1,488,211. In 1913, as in 1912, only one variety decreased in value—stoneware, which declined $236,211.

The value of white ware, including china but excluding sanitary ware and porcelain electrical supplies, was $17,490,871 in 1913, compared with $17,007,736 in 1912, an increase of $483,135. If the value of sanitary ware and porcelain electrical supplies is added, the total for 1913 is $31,443,450.

China ware showed an increase in value of $246,755. This product has increased in value almost steadily since 1902, the value in 1913, the highest recorded, being nearly twice as great as it was eleven years ago. Red earthenware showed an increase of $42,250 over 1912, white ware $237,380, and sanitary ware $312,583.

Ohio is the leading pottery-producing State in the Union, reporting for 1913 wares valued at $16,519,889, or more than 43 per cent of the total, an increase of $1,011,154. Her principal pottery product is white ware, which constituted nearly 64 per cent of the value of Ohio's entire pottery output in 1913. The second in importance is porcelain electrical supplies. New Jersey is the second largest pottery-producing State. In 1913 New Jersey produced wares valued at $8,838,545, or more than 23 per cent of the total. West Virginia is the third in rank among the pottery-producing States, reporting for 1913 wares valued at $3,424,887.

The pottery imported into the United States in 1913 was valued at $10,177,451, and this added to the domestic production made a total of $58,169,836. After deducting exports, domestic $568,163 and foreign $34,816, the net apparent consumption was valued at $47,575,847, of which the domestic production was nearly 80 per cent.
